Pastrano receives MLK Distinguished Service Award

By Jeffery Seay
EDITOR IN CHIEF

Few employees achieve “rock star” status in their departments with students, faculty and staff. If ever there was one, it is Jimmy Pastrano, the coordinator of graduate studies in the College of Education’s Department of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies.

Pastrano is the unofficial adviser to more than 300 graduate students in the department, counseling them about policies and procedures related to coursework, deadlines, programs of study and other academically related matters. Approximately 30 percent are minority students, and anywhere from 2 to 10 percent are international students.

“It is not an exaggeration to say that Jimmy has guided each and every one of these students in their pursuit of a graduate degree,” said Patrice Iatarola, associate professor and chair of the department.

“If I were to poll our alumni and current students as to what was the most critical factor for them in deciding to come to FSU and for succeeding at FSU, I truly have no doubt that the answer would be a resounding ‘Jimmy!’,” Iatarola said. “I take an informal poll at our annual new student orientation and, time and again, the answer is ‘Jimmy!’”

During the university’s commemoration of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Iatarola says, “It is not an exaggeration to say that Jimmy has guided each and every one of these students in their pursuit of a graduate degree.”

Starke now leading Center for Academic Retention and Enhancement

By Jeffery Seay
EDITOR IN CHIEF

Tadarrayl M. Starke was appointed as the new director of the Center for Academic Retention and Enhancement (CARE). The university’s divisions of Student Affairs and Academic Affairs jointly operate the center, which helps first-generation and economically disadvantaged students make the adjustment to college life.

Each year, CARE’s Summer Bridge Program admits roughly 350 students who are beginning their academic careers at the university. At any given time, there are 1,000 to 1,200 Florida State students affiliated with CARE. The program serves both minority and non-minority students.

“The Center for Academic Retention and Enhancement is a vital part of Florida State, and I am extremely excited for the opportunity to serve its first-generation students,” Starke said. “I look forward to expanding upon the rich legacy of leadership CARE has benefited from over the years, as well as connecting our students to the vast resources Florida State has to offer for their academic, professional and personal success.”

Spread THE Word

Since 1995, Florida State students have been recording their service hours through the ServScript program and have recorded more than 2.5 million hours. The ServScript program is designed to formally recognize a student’s commitment to community service on his or her official academic transcript. Students also use the ServScript program to qualify for the service portion of the Garnet and Gold Scholar Society.

In celebration: Black History Month

“African-American history is an essential thread of the American narrative that traces our nation’s enduring struggle to perfect itself.”
— President Barack Obama

February is Black History Month, or African-American History Month. The theme of this year’s observance is “Black Women in American Culture and History.”

The distinguished accomplishments of prominent figures such as Phillis Wheatley, Harriet Tubman, Ida B. Wells, Rosa Parks and Rita Dove continue to be highly appreciated in today’s American culture.

These women, and so many more, never succumbed to victimhood, oppression or other challenges, according to the Association for the Study of African-American Life and History. Rather, they strove to press forward to uplift themselves, their families, their communities and the nation. Regardless of the times in which they lived, these women displayed characteristics and perseverance that continue to serve as benchmarks of dedication, patriotism and leadership in our ever-evolving, diverse nation.

Historian Carter G. Woodson first established the commemorative event as Black History Week Feb. 12, 1926. He chose February because it included the birthdays of President Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass. President Gerald Ford declared a national observance in 1976. During each February since, the United States has recognized the contributions made by its citizens of African descent. To learn more, visit www.asalh.org.

Research published in State unites professors in common cause

By Jeffery Seay

EDITOR IN CHIEF

You might call State the “hometown newspaper” of Florida State University — reportage that draws people from wide-ranging academic fields into a close-knit community of shared purpose.

State did just that for Jimmy Woodward, an accounting executive-in-residence, and Qing-Xiang “Amy” Sang, a professor of chemistry and biochemistry. Woodward, who lost a sister-in-law to breast cancer five years ago, was moved to action when he read about Sang’s research to identify early warning “biomarkers” for human prostate and breast cancer in the March 28, 2011, issue. The story was written by News and Research Communications writer Barry Ray.

Woodward decided to contribute $2,000 toward Sang’s research experiments from a business that he owns, Bando Shoes, which sells marching band shoes and accessories. The money was raised from the sale of pink gloves to marching bands across the country in recognition of National Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

“The $2,000 contribution was 10 percent of our proceeds from selling the gloves last October,” Woodward said. “I can’t think of a better use for this money than to invest in Dr. Sang’s research, which could someday save lives with early detection of these forms of cancer.”

The Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry put the $2,000 contribution on account with the Florida State University Foundation, establishing the Woodward Fund to be used by Sang and her students to purchase research materials and supplies.

“Our laboratory is grateful for Mr. Woodward’s support,” Sang said. “We were pleasantly surprised by this honor, and applaud his generosity. We will give him reports about the research progress we make using his funds.”

“We saw that more working professionals were coming into the need for a master’s degree. There was also a desire to do more than the traditional insurance designations.”

— Kathleen McCullough, an associate professor and FSU’s State Farm Insurance Professor in Risk Management/Insurance in the College of Business, as quoted by PropertyCasualty360.com discussing the increasingly popular online education opportunities in risk management at many American universities. According to McCullough, Florida State’s program stands out primarily because of its online master’s degree in risk management.
The 2012 session of the Florida Legislature began Jan. 7. Employees should note the following:

• President Eric J. Barron and Assistant Vice President for Governmental Relations Kathleen Daly are the university’s two registered lobbyists. No one on campus other than Barron or Daly is authorized to lobby for the university or the State University System.

• The Legislature periodically requests that faculty and staff members attend committee meetings or formally respond to questions about certain issues. Employees who are asked to appear before a committee must notify Daly at (850) 644-4453 and submit a Legislative Contact Form prior to making an appearance. The form can be found at www.govrel.fsu.edu. Employees who have difficulty accessing the form can request a hard copy at (850) 644-4453 or tmoore@admin.fsu.edu.

• The campus network of legislative liaisons for 2012 are: Academic Affairs, Anne Blankenship, 644-0170; Athletics, Jennifer Garry, 644-3249; Budget and Analysis/Controller’s Office, Ralph Alvarez, 644-4203, and Michael Lake, 644-2478; College of Communication, Bob Pekurny, 644-3462; College of Education, Marcy Driscoll, 644-6885, and Sissi Carroll, 644-6885; College of Medicine, John Fogarty, 644-1346, and Laura Brock, 645-9429; College of Nursing, Dianne Speake, 644-8409; Finance and Administration, Terry Fulcher, 645-4926; Financial Aid, Darryl Marshall, 644-1993; Florida High, Lynn Wicker, 245-3703; Human Resources/Chief Diversity Officer, Renisha Gibbs, 644-8082; Human Resources, Joyce Ingram, 644-5457; Governmental Relations, Kathleen Daly, 644-4453; Magnet Lab, Brian Fairhurst, 645-4864; Office of General Counsel, Mike Cramer, 644-4440; Office of Research, Beth Hodges, 644-3347; Physical Plant/Campus Design, Dennis Bailey, 644-3369, and Steve Adamick, 644-8136; Purchasing, Marcie Doolittle, 644-9719; Student Affairs, Mary Coburn, 644-5590; Student Government, Vicki Dobiyanski, 644-0939; and Student Gov’t/Legislative Affairs, Asimina Boutzoukas, 644-1653.

Through this network, legislation that effects the university is routinely routed to appropriate departments and offices for timely responses and/or information. These responses are routed to the division liaisons, then to the Office of Governmental Relations, and ultimately to the lobbyists who serve collectively on the university’s behalf.

Nothing here is intended to discourage Florida State’s employees from exercising their individual rights as citizens or as members of groups or organizations not affiliated with the university. Such rights include the freedom to express their views on legislation, provided that the views are not presented as those of the university, the State University System or a sub-unit of these.
Seminoles and Eagles join forces: During the Jan. 17 meeting of the Tallahassee Community College board of trustees, TCC President Jim Murdaugh and Florida State University Panama City Dean Ken Shaw signed a memorandum of understanding to allow TCC students to take FSUPC course offerings on the TCC campus. Specifically, the agreement establishes articulations in two areas: The TCC Associate in Science in criminal justice technology will articulate to the FSUPC Bachelor of Science in public safety and security, police science major; and the TCC Associate in Arts degree will articulate in its entirety (60 credit hours) to the FSUPC Bachelor of Science in public safety and security, law enforcement operations major. At the signing ceremony were, from left, Andrew Konapelsky, FSUPC registrar; Missy Conner, FSUPC director of student affairs; Tom Kelley, FSUPC faculty member of public safety and security; Shaw; Allison DeFoor, chairman of the TCC board of trustees; Ken McDonald, FSUPC faculty member of public safety and security; and Murdaugh.

MLK Award

Jan. 12, Pastrano was announced as the recipient of the 2012 Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Distinguished Service Award, given to an employee who exemplifies the principles and ideals of King. The award carries a $1,000 stipend. “Serving a diverse student population and being a dependable resource for them is immensely rewarding,” Pastrano said. “It’s a simple but very fulfilling pleasure.”

“I avoid letting students and their faculty members thank me,” Pastrano said. “Knowing that they worked en masse to nominate me for the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Distinguished Service Award profoundly touches me because of the significance of Dr. King and his dedicated mission to create a path for others to succeed, while preserving their self-respect.”

Pastrano first came to the university in 1993 after earning a bachelor’s degree in geography and planning from Texas State University. He began working in the Department of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies in 2000. Since then, he has completed a thesis in health care geography and graduated with a Master of Science degree in geography from Florida State.

“Truly, I was able to fulfill part of my dream through the committed support from the Florida State geography department, The Graduate School, and most importantly, my academic committee,” Pastrano said.

Currently, Pastrano handles all matters related to Educational Leadership and Policy Studies’ graduate students, from inquiries to admissions to graduation. What’s more, he assists in formulating department-level graduate policy, administers graduate exams, and coordinates student orientation sessions.

Iatarola further praised Pastrano for embracing diversity and striving for a society that is colorblind.

“It’s not simply words with Jimmy — it’s actions,” she said. “He learns about students personally and socio-culturally, irrespective of who they are.”

A recent departmental Quality Enhancement Review cited Pastrano as one of the department’s most valued assets.

Wielding a vast knowledge of the department’s programs and degree requirements, Pastrano spends his days fielding a seemingly endless stream of student questions with grace and patience. “I find Mr. Jimmy Pastrano to be an exceptional employee who on a daily basis goes ‘above and beyond’ in his administrative support to international students, regardless of their cultural backgrounds,” said Amirul Mukminin, a Fulbright doctoral candidate and student representative with the department’s Advisory Committee.

Paul Stonecipher, who is a graduate research assistant in the department and the doctoral chair of Florida State’s Higher Education Student Association, lauded Pastrano’s commitment and work ethic.

“Martin Luther King Jr. is quoted as saying, ‘All labor that uplifts humanity has dignity and importance, and should be undertaken with painstaking excellence.’ It is clear from the reliance the department has placed on Jimmy Pastrano that he fully dedicates himself to the values and the students of this department,” Stonecipher said.
Diverse Leadership Mentoring Program seeks leadership mentors

The university’s Diverse Leadership Mentoring Program is currently seeking faculty members, Administrative & Professional staff members, alumni or graduate students who are willing to serve as mentors to support the development of emerging student leaders.

Participation in the program is voluntary and flexible in terms of time commitments and participation requirements. The program is coordinated by the Office of Human Resources to support the Leaders Educated to Make a Difference (LEAD) Initiative, which is part of the university’s overall Quality Enhancement Plan.

Mentors stand to gain personal gratification and pride from enriching a student’s experience. In addition, they enhance their coaching, feedback and leadership skills; demonstrate commitment to professional and personal development; and gain fresh perspectives and the opportunity to give back to the university through the development of future leaders.

Students receive opportunities to build skills and knowledge while attaining goals for leadership development through a formal mentoring relationship with a leadership practitioner.

Additional program information, as well as mentee and mentor application forms, are available at https://hrapps.fsu.edu/mentor.

To learn more, contact Sandra Dixon, associate director, Human Resources, and Diverse Leadership Mentoring Program coordinator, at ssdixon@admin.fsu.edu or (850) 645-6468.
Starke succeeds CARE’s founding director, Angela Richardson, who retired last semester.

“Tadarrayl Starke is very well-prepared personally and professionally to continue the legacy that Angela Richardson developed through the CARE program,” said Mary Coburn, vice president for Student Affairs. “He is an excellent role model for students and staff alike. Through his high standards and commitment to excellence, he will work tirelessly to ensure student success.”

Starke, who has been the associate director of CARE since June, is working on a doctorate in higher education from Florida State. He earned a bachelor’s in psychology and a master’s in higher education, both from FSU.

Karen Laughlin, dean of Undergraduate Studies, praised Starke’s commitment to fostering academic success and student engagement as a force that will inspire and motivate the students who are served by CARE.

“I am delighted to welcome Tadarrayl Starke as the new director of the CARE program,” Laughlin said. “He brings tremendous energy, leadership and a clear vision for moving this nationally recognized program to the next level. His abilities as a team player will further strengthen the network of connections across the campus, which are so essential to the success of this program.”

Laughlin also praised Richardson as a tireless advocate for the center.

“Angie Richardson’s work truly epitomizes the name of the office that she has led for the past 11 years,” Laughlin said. “She has been a creative leader whose dedication and concern, for both students and her staff, have been keys to the development of this unique program.

“It was no small job to bring together an assortment of pre-collegiate and college-level programs under the CARE umbrella,” Laughlin said. “In doing so, she helped establish a route to college success for hundreds of students who otherwise might never had had a chance to earn a college degree — much less earn it with the distinction displayed by so many of our CARE graduates.”

Richardson began working at FSU in 1985 as a research associate in Human Resources, investigating employee complaints of discrimination and harassment, and preparing reports on the university’s efforts to provide equity and access for underrepresented groups for the Board of Regents and other outside compliance agencies. She later served as director of Minority Academic Programs for the Division of Undergraduate Studies. In 2000, she was chosen as the founding director of CARE.

“I take great pride in the knowledge that CARE has been institutionalized as an integral department within Florida State to address the needs of first-generation and other disadvantaged students,” Richardson said. “It takes coordinated inter-institutional collaborative efforts to ensure the success of CARE. This has continued to exist and expand over the years.”

Richardson says she is most proud of the students of CARE who, despite enormous challenges, have distinguished themselves academically by earning undergraduate and, in some cases, graduate degrees.

“As a result, they are able to make a better life for themselves and their families and become productive citizens,” Richardson said.

Florida State University Schools lauded for healthy meals

The Elementary School at Florida State University Schools (FSUS) recently received a bronze-level Healthier US School Challenge (HUSSC) Award for 2010-2011. It was one of only two schools in Florida that received the notable recognition.

The HUSSC award is part of the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s (USDA) Healthier US Schools Challenge, which encourages K-12 schools to develop menus and preparation strategies to improve school meals and address childhood health and obesity issues. Schools receiving this award commit to meeting criteria throughout a four-year certification period.

In this schoolwide effort, piloted by FSUS Food Services administrators and staff, the Elementary School met and surpassed expectations.

“Since this national award was created by the USDA in 2004, we are one of only eight Florida schools chosen for this honor,” said Linda Searight, director of FSUS Food Services. “Schools are evaluated on the nutritional quality of the meals they serve, the physical education programs they provide and the nutrition education they make available. I work with a wonderful child nutrition staff, administration and faculty who make it a priority to provide healthy meals and physical activity so that Florida State University Schools can serve education every day.”

Representatives from the USDA and several state agencies will recognize the FSUS for its achievement during a special awards ceremony at the Elementary School on Oct. 12, 2012.

>> Extreme-scale computing workshop: A two-day workshop geared for Florida State faculty members, “Research Computing on Multicore and Many-Core Systems: Toward Extreme-Scale Computing,” will take place March 9 and 10 at the Augustus B. Turnbull III Florida State Conference Center.

The workshop will introduce researchers to next-generation computing architectures and development environments for extreme-scale computing. The workshop also will introduce the Sunshine State Education and Research Computing Alliance (SSERCA) and the ways in which this new organization can help to support statewide collaborations related to extreme-scale computing.

The workshop is free, but registration is required. Registration: www.sserca.org.
