2nd Annual Student Veterans Film Festival 'The Invisible War' to be screened, inaugural award will be presented

A Florida State University student initiative will bring Oscar- and Emmy-nominated filmmaker Kirby Dick and his critically acclaimed film "The Invisible War" to the 2nd Annual Student Veteran Film Festival on Monday, Nov. 12, at Ruby Diamond Concert Hall.

A collaborative effort between the Collegiate Veterans Association, Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic Association and College of Mo- tion Picture Arts, the event will feature a discussion with Dick, who directed "The Invisible War." The film, an investigative documentary about the epidemic of rape within the U.S. military, focuses on the challenges of women and men who have been victims and how they have fought back to enact policies to combat the problem.

"We are proud to screen this nationally recognized film and host an event that creates enlightened discussion about an issue that affects servicemen and women and our nation's veterans," said Ryan Taylor, president of the FSU Collegiate Veterans Association. "Our goal is to bring national attention to instances of rape and sexual assault that pervade not only the military but college campus-

Huckaba named dean of College of Arts and Sciences

By Jill Elish

INTERIM DIRECTOR, NEWS AND RESEARCH COMMUNICATIONS

Provost and Executive Vice President for Academic Affairs Garnett S. Stokes announced the appointment of Sam Huckaba as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, effective immediately.

Sam Huckaba

Huckaba, former senior associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and a professor of mathematics, was selected after a national search. He has served as interim dean since July 2011 when Joseph Travis stepped down in order to devote more time to his research.

"Dr. Huckaba has an outstanding record of academic and administrative experience," Stokes said. "He is committed to academic excellence, the merits of diversity and the spirit of innovation, and he is dedicated to working closely with faculty, staff, students and alumni in leading the College of Arts and Sciences to even higher levels of achievement. It will be a pleasure to work with him in his new role.”

As dean, Huckaba will serve as the chief academic and administrative officer of Florida State’s oldest and largest college. With nearly 500 faculty members, the College of Arts and Sciences is widely recognized for its outstanding academic programs and high productivity in research and creative activity, Stokes said, adding that the college has provided generations of undergraduate students instruction in the liberal arts disciplines.

The college includes 18 departments ranging from biological science to religion and 18 programs, centers and institutes. More than 1,700 graduate and 8,900 undergraduate students are enrolled in 28 doctoral programs, 37 master’s programs and 43 undergraduate majors.

Huckaba said he will work with the faculty to foster excellence in research, education and outreach programs while strengthening the core role of arts and sciences within the university and promoting collaboration across disciplinary boundaries.

“I am honored and humbled by the appointment and enthusiastic about the future,” Huckaba said. “As I have learned over the past year, the job is thoroughly energizing. The faculty, students and staff are productive, and their accomplishments make the College of Arts and Sciences successful. I consider it a great privilege to serve as its leader, and I look forward to helping the college move forward.”

Huckaba began his career at Florida State as an assistant professor of mathematics in 1987 and was promoted to associate professor in 1992 and full professor in 1998.

Huckaba has published research in commutative algebra and algebraic geometry, two classical areas of pure mathematics, and has pursued interests toward applications of algebra, including cryptography and coding theory.

Campus to celebrate distance learning week

The university's Office of Distance Learning will celebrate National Distance Learning Week from Monday, Nov. 5, to Friday, Nov. 9, to create greater awareness and recognize leaders and best practices in the field.

Festivities include the announcement of Distance Learning Innovative Instruction Awards for Florida State faculty and mentors whose technology-enhanced courses show excellence in design and effective use of technologies that improve distance teaching and learning.

Prizes also will be awarded to online students who submit winning essays or videos outlining how Florida State distance learning courses or programs have helped them achieve their academic and professional goals.

An open house and other activities are planned for Florida State faculty, mentors, staff and students. For specifics on the open house and award guidelines and deadlines, visit campus.fsu.edu or distance.fsu.edu.

Seminole Dining introduces new eateries

Seminole Dining, in partnership with the Office of Business Services, launched two new campus-dining locations — a food truck with Latin cuisine and a new take on the tradition Subway sandwich shop.

La Lola Loca

Mobi Munch and Seminole Dining have rolled out Florida State's first mobile food truck, La Lola Loca. Serving the essence of Latin American cuisine, the mobile truck will offer marinated meats in fresh herbs and spices, and fiery toppings with time-honored pairings.

The truck has various stops across campus, with its main hub being the intersection of Chieftan and Call Street. To find out where the truck is located, visit www.facebook.com/lalolalocatruckfsu.

Subway Café

Seminole Dining also opened an 85-seat Subway Café overlooking the Oglesby Union Amphitheater. The café, which is a new concept from the popular sandwich chain, includes two lines for faster service, upscale décor, several TVs and wireless Internet connections. An expanded menu features Seattle's Best Coffee — including espresso and blended drinks — and Coca-Cola Freestyle machines that give more than 100 possibilities of custom beverages. It is the first Subway Café to be placed on any college campus.

To learn more, visit www.seminole-dining.com, or follow Seminole Dining on Twitter and Facebook.

Stem cell expert to speak Nov. 19

A scientist who produced what Time magazine called last year's top medical breakthrough is bringing his knowledge of stem cells to Florida State for a special seminar Nov. 19.

Dieter Egli, senior research fellow at the New York Stem Cell Foundation, will discuss the generation of therapeutically relevant cells for diabetes. The seminar, "Reprogramming and the Cell Cycle," will take place Monday, Nov. 19, from noon to 1 p.m. in the College of Medicine Auditorium.

"He's one of the bright young scientists working in the field of producing human stem cells from non-embryonic sources to use in the treatment of human injuries and diseases," said Myra Hurt, the College of Medicine's senior associate dean for research and graduate programs. "We hope Florida State's entire research community will come to hear him."

Egli's research that was published in the October 2011 Nature caught Time's eye and eventually led the news magazine to declare him one of that year's "People Who Mattered." Now his path is leading him to Tallahassee. It all started when he read a research paper published by the Hurt lab. In that paper, assistant scholar/scientist Raed Rizkallah described the production of an antibody that, like only a few others in the world, marks a specific time during cell division. Hurt's lab agreed to share some of that research reagent with Egli to see whether it might prove valuable in his research. And in the ensuing conversation, Hurt invited him to FSU.

'myFSU' to refer to family of online tools

With several new services coming online during the coming months, "myFSU" will serve as the title for an array of technology enhancements.

"The advanced systems technology that Florida State adopted allows components of that system to interact to a greater degree than our existing structure ever could," said Associate Vice President for Information Technology Michael Barrett. "So it made sense to express that by giving these components a common prefix or title."

The "myFSU" name was first associated with the student email system and then was applied to myFSU Mobile (the app for mobile devices) and the university's virtual computer lab, myFSU VLab, which provides remote access to most campus computer-lab software.

New members of the myFSU family will include the comprehensive student information system, myFSU Student Central. Some components of this system have already started rolling out, and others will launch in phases over the next 14 months.

Additional myFSU members include those currently within OMNI, which will undergo a gradual rebranding. These members include University Financial Services (myFSU OMNI Financials) and Human Resources (myFSU OMNI Human Resources).

The new Web portal, which will group these and other password-protected resources in one place, will simply be called "myFSU" since it will serve as the gateway to these online tools.

"The myFSU system promises to provide our students, faculty and staff with greater access to its content, more efficient means of sharing that information and an enhanced user experience," Barrett said.

Fulbright-Nehru visiting fellow to explore future research at FSU

Fulbright-Nehru Visiting Fellow Sudeshna Lahiri is spending the fall 2012 semester at Florida State's Center for International Studies in Educational Research and Development (CISERD), where she will work with students and faculty, and explore research opportunities.

Lahiri comes to Florida State from the University of Calcutta, where she teaches and conducts research in the field of teacher education. While at CISERD, she will lecture in Florida State's College of Education on teacher appraisals and other aspects of the education system in her home nation of India.

"CISERD has a history of work in education in international settings," Lahiri said, "and I look forward to learning more about the center's research and its success in helping nations strengthen systems of education and teacher development."

Lahiri's lectures and presentations will help FSU students learn how research-based techniques in teaching are applied in classrooms far beyond Florida, said Jeffrey Milligan, director of CISERD.

"We are honored to have Dr. Lahiri come to the Center for International Studies in Educational Research and Development," Milligan said. "The Fulbright-Nehru program allows CISERD to bring promising researchers from India to share their findings and their experiences with students and faculty here at Florida State University."

>> PARKING FINES INCREASE: Florida State's updated parking policies include an increase in its citation fees to serve as a more effective deterrent in response to an escalation of parking violations. Parking citation fines now begin at $30 and enforcement hours have been extended to 8 p.m., Monday through Friday, to better safeguard and ensure compliance on campus. In an effort to reduce late fees, electronic notifications of ticket issuances will be sent to the email address of violators. In addition, an email reminder will be sent five days before the due date. The deadline for paying parking citations is now 30 days after the infraction, instead of the former 10-day deadline. To read more about parking and traffic regulations, visit <http://parking.fsu.edu/Parking/Regulation.html>.

>> STRIVE NOT TO DRIVE DAY: Sustainable Campus at Florida State is sponsoring Strive Not to Drive Day on Thursday, Nov. 15. The day is an effort to promote walking, biking, the use of public transportation or carpooling, rather than individuals driving themselves. Faculty, staff and students are asked to complete an online pledge form by Nov. 14 to promise to use an alternative mode of getting to campus on Nov. 15. The first 200 pledges will receive a free T-shirt and be entered into a grand prize drawing for a new bicycle donated by University Cycles. All participants will receive 10 percent off at Atomic Coffee.

Part of Strive Not to Drive Day will include an alternative transportation fair on the Oglesby Union Green from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Participants can learn about various commute options in Tallahassee. At noon, a bike commuting expert will present best practices and tips about biking to campus.

Dick will receive the inaugural “FSU Student Veteran Torchlight Award for Outstanding Achievement in Filmmaking” following the screening of the film. The award, which comes with a $25,000 stipend, will be given annually to a filmmaker who illuminates issues affecting veterans.

“As part of Florida State’s commitment to become the most veteran-friendly and veteran-empowering public university in the nation, we would like to recognize filmmakers who have the courage to explore the full range of issues that affect military service members, veterans and their families,” said FSU President Eric J. Barron. “I am pleased to honor Kirby Dick with this inaugural award for his powerful film that has already changed the way the military investigates sexual assault. It is my hope that this award will encourage other filmmakers to seek out the stories that need to be told.”

The film festival is intended to raise awareness of student-veterans’ issues and bridge the gap between veterans and the community. Paul Cohen, director of the College of Motion Picture Arts’ Torchlight program, secured the rights to screen the “The Invisible War.”

“With the hard work of our students, the Student Veteran Film Festival is already developing a reputation for screening contemporary cinema that becomes the center of national discussion,” Cohen said. “This year’s festival represents a special opportunity for everyone in our community to participate in that discussion and to meet a revered filmmaker — and some of his subjects — of a very important film.”

The film, distributed by Cinedigm and Docurama Films, won the Audience Award for Best U.S. Documentary at the 2012 Sundance Film Festival; the Nestor Almendros Award for Courage in Filmmaking at the 2012 Human Rights Watch Film Festival; and the Silver Heart Award at the 2012 Dallas International Film Festival. It also has been nominated for an IDA Award for Best Feature.

The Nov. 12 festival will begin with a reception at 3 p.m., followed by a 4 p.m. screening of the film. After the screening, a panel will discuss the film at 5:45 p.m. Panelists include Dick; Amy Ziering, one of the film’s producers; Army Sgt. Myla Haider and attorney Susan Burke, both featured in the film; and Terrance Coonan, director of Florida State’s Center for the Advancement of Human Rights. Afterward, the audience will have the opportunity to participate in a question-and-answer session with the panelists. The presentation of the Torchlight Award at 7:15 p.m. will conclude the festival.

Symposium will ask, 'Are college students actually learning?'

In the 2011 book "Academically Adrift: Limited Learning on College Campuses," New York University sociology Professor Richard Arum and University of Virginia sociology Assistant Professor Josipa Roksa investigated how much college students are actually learning. The authors looked at data from surveys, transcripts and the Collegiate Learning Assessment, a standardized test administered to students as freshmen and again at a later time. Their analyses concluded that a large proportion of college students do not demonstrate significant gains in such skills as critical thinking, complex reasoning and writing.

As a follow-up discussion of the book, University Libraries and Friends of the FSU Libraries will host "A Symposium on Higher Education: 'Academically Adrift' or On Course?" on Thursday, Nov. 1, from 10 a.m. to noon in the Scholars Commons Reading Room, Strozier Library. The symposium will feature a panel presentation and discussion on the student learning issues raised in "Academically Adrift." The panelists will be Provost and Executive Vice President for Academic Affairs Garnett S. Stokes, Dean of Undergraduate Studies Karen Laughlin, College of Business Dean Caryn Beck-Dudley, educational leadership and policy studies Assistant Professor David Tandberg, and Reading/Writing Center director Jennifer Wells. Educational leadership and policy studies Assistant Professor Brad Cox will serve as moderator.

"With the selection of critical thinking as the theme for the university's SACS reaccreditation effort, this presentation and discussion is timely," said Robert B. Bradley, Florida State's vice president for Planning and Programs. "The program will focus on both the larger issues raised in the book as well as how these issues are perceived at Florida State and what changes, if any, might be needed."

International Programs accepting faculty applications to teach abroad

The university's International Programs is accepting faculty applications from Nov. 15, 2012, to Jan. 15, 2013, to teach abroad during the 12 months beginning with summer 2014.

Every year, International Programs sends Florida State faculty members to its study-abroad locations in London, England; Valencia, Spain; Florence, Italy; and Panama City, Panama. What's more, accepted faculty members have taught and led programs in such diverse places as China, Peru, Turkey, Israel, Russia and South Africa.

While studying abroad provides incalculable benefits for students, the instructors return to the United States having reaped personal and professional rewards from their work abroad as well. Professors enjoy one-on-one interaction with students in small classes while sharing in their study-abroad experiences.

Instructors are encouraged to incorporate local culture and ideas in their course material and, as a result, often return to Tallahassee recharged with new ideas for approaching courses. Teaching abroad also can be combined with the pursuit of instructors' personal research interests by giving them the ability to spend time in a foreign country before and/or after their teaching duties.

In addition to professional enrichment, involvement in International Programs is an excellent way to support the university's global initiatives, including the Global Pathways Certificate and Garnet and Gold Scholar Society. As integral partners with International Programs, faculty members can promote the value of being global citizens to all of Florida State's students.

"Every year we're excited to receive new proposals from our faculty," said Jim Pitts, director of International Programs. "We encourage our faculty to submit proposals for study in any area of the world that will enrich their academic content and curriculum. Now more than ever, a relevant international experience is critical to an outstanding education and the institution that provides it."

BENEFITS

>>OPEN ENROLLMENT: The State of Florida Benefits Open Enrollment period for the 2013 Plan Year, which is currently underway, will end at 6 p.m. ET on Friday, Nov. 2, 2012. Detailed information about the group insurance and supplemental plan offerings has been mailed to eligible employees. All employees should log in to the People First website (<http://peoplefirst.myflorida.com>) to update their mailing addresses and other contact information. This will ensure that employees can receive important benefits-related notifications from People First. Employees who do not know their People First IDs can send an email to the Benefits Office at insben@admin.fsu.edu to have it sent to them. Detailed information about Open Enrollment is available at www.myflorida.com/mybenefits/Health/Medical\_Plans/Annual\_Enrollment2013.htm.

More information: (850) 644-4015 or insben@admin.fsu.edu.

>>OPEN ENROLLMENT CORRECTION

PERIOD: Employees who made changes during the regular Open Enrollment period that ends Friday, Nov. 2 will receive a confirmation statement of their elections by email or postal mail. Employees who need to make a correction to a change made during Open Enrollment may do so during a correction period from Nov. 5 to Nov. 16. If employees need to make corrections, they can call the service center at (866) 663-4735 by 6 p.m. ET on Nov. 16. Payroll deductions will begin on the Dec. 14 check for January coverage, so employees are asked to review their paychecks to be sure the deductions are correct.

>>GROUP INSURANCE QUALIFYING STATUS

CHANGES: Effective Sept. 25, 2012, the Division of State Group Insurance has increased the window to make a Qualifying Status Change (QSC) event from 31 days to 60 days. This change gives employees more time to report any significant life events (such as a marriage; an adoption or birth; a divorce; or the loss of eligibility for coverage) that may affect their group insurance benefits. For more information about QSCs, including a complete list of events and documentation requirements, visit www.myflorida.com/mybenefits/Health/Making\_Changes.htm. Employees who need to submit a QSC must do so within the new 60-day window. All changes should be made online at the People First website (<http://peoplefirst.myflorida.com>).

Hathi Trust membership offers access to millions of resources

Florida State now is a member of the Hathi Trust, allowing faculty and student researchers access to millions of resources from other member institutions throughout the world.

The Hathi Trust is a partnership of more than 60 major research institutions and libraries working to build a reliable and comprehensive digital archive of library materials with dramatically improved functionality and access to the resources. It is certified as a trustworthy digital repository by the Center for Research Libraries. Hathi (pronounced hah-TEE) is the Hindi word for elephant, an animal traditionally associated with size, memory and wisdom.

"University Libraries is very pleased to partner with the Hathi Trust," said Associate Dean for Collection Development Roy Ziegler. "Through this collaboration, we are able to offer easy access to a huge collection of resources that will be invaluable to scholars and researchers at Florida State."

By joining the Hathi Trust, University Libraries now offers members of the Florida State community the ability to search an ever-growing repository that currently contains more than 10.5 million total volumes, including books and serials from libraries around the world. Items available in full-text view through the Hathi Trust will appear in a regular search of the FSU library's catalog. Users may also visit the Hathi Trust's website (www.hathitrust.org) and log in with their FSU library credentials to access additional features and functions. For more information, visit University Libraries' guide to the HathiTrust: <http://guides.lib.fsu.edu/hathitrust>.

The Hathi Trust website allows full-text searching within each work as well as across the entire repository, which includes both public domain and copyrighted works. Public domain works can be viewed immediately online via a page-turner application. If a work is still within copyright, users can search the work for keywords to determine if the resource is of use to them, but there is no full-text access at this time. University librarians will work with the patron to locate a copy of the resource. There is also a tool that permits users to create and save their own virtual collections of resources within the repository.

In 2011, the Hathi Trust was sued by the Authors' Guild for copyright infringement for digitizing material still under copyright. Recently, a federal court judge sided with the Hathi Trust, citing the service's "contribution to the progress of science and cultivation of the arts" and support for accessibility requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The mission of the Hathi Trust is to contribute to the common good by collecting, organizing, preserving, communicating and sharing the record of human knowledge.
