'Ready to rumble':

President reports Florida State is on the move

By Jeffery Seay
EDITOR IN CHIEF

During his annual State of the University Address Nov. 7, President Eric J. Barron put into perspective the groundwork laid over the past three years as integral to Florida State University's next steps toward greater success.

"We've been laying track with big ideas," Barron said to faculty and administrators assembled in Ruby Diamond Concert Hall. "Now we're emerging from the recession leaner, hungrier and ready to rumble — not in the sense of a street fight, but the deep, resonant sound of something powerful and on the move."

Florida State's focus on academic excellence is not only intended to move higher in national rankings, but more importantly to foster greater student career success.

Eric J. Barron

In the past two years, Florida State has added 100 new faculty members, with more to come as a result of increased "pre-eminence" funding from the state, according to Barron. In the next five years, Florida State is set to receive an additional $15 million per year, which the university intends to use for targeted purposes geared to move the university into the nation's top 25 public universities. A major target is decreasing the student/faculty ratio.

Human Sciences dean receives lifetime achievement award

By Jeffery Seay
EDITOR IN CHIEF

Billie J. Collier, who has served as dean of the College of Human Sciences since 2006 and has given a lifetime of service to the field of human sciences, received the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Board on Human Sciences at its annual awards breakfast Nov. 11.

Each year, the board — part of the Association of Public and Land-grant Universities — honors a nationally recognized leader in the field who has a significant history of promoting and advancing it in higher education.

"I am humbled to receive this recognition from my Board on Human Sciences colleagues who are leading the human sciences nationally," Collier said. "It has been my honor to serve the profession over many years and to see its success in improving the quality of life for individuals, families and communities."

Collier, who is retiring Jan. 16, graduated from Tulane University with a bachelor's degree in music in 1966. From there, she found her way to the human sciences, earning a master's degree in textiles and clothing in 1976 and a doctorate in interdisciplinary home economics in 1981, both from the University of Tennessee.

Throughout her career, Collier has written or contributed to numerous books, written nearly 50 journal articles, and participated in a multitude of conference proceedings. In addition, she has received five patents.

For the second consecutive year, Florida State is one of the nation's top research institutions for producing student Fulbright scholars, according to the Chronicle of Higher Education, which recently published a list of the top producers of U.S. Fulbright students by type of institution.

EDUCATING BETTER GRADUATES

Initiatives geared toward producing critical thinkers

I am excited to share with you a significant undertaking across the university that will ensure Florida State students develop the critical and creative thinking skills they need to thrive both intellectually and materially after they graduate.

This comprehensive effort has two parts — a campus initiative and a curriculum initiative. The first encompasses the university's Quality Enhancement Plan under the leadership of Professor Helen Burke. The second is being led by Professor Matthew Shaftel.

The overall goal is to produce not only graduates but lifelong learners. Employers have made clear that critical thinking skills and the ability to adapt and be flexible to rapidly changing demands in a fast-paced world are more important than a student's major. We want all our students to learn to consider all sides of an issue and present a credible argument in support of their reasoned solution.

After much investigation, a QEP committee of dedicated people determined that although Florida State does this already, we can improve. We can explicitly teach critical thinking. We can encourage and support faculty in developing and teaching critical thinking strategies within their disciplines.

Meanwhile, the Liberal Studies for the 21st Century Task Force has been in charge of a complete overhaul of liberal studies courses for freshmen and sophomores. A signature feature of the curriculum is our new ECourses, which focus on specific and timely topics of global interest. Students will be required to take at least two such courses, which will also build skills in critical and creative thinking and problem solving.

Both of these initiatives tie in very well with a strategic plan put forth by President Eric Barron to ensure our graduates are ready to pursue their careers. They place us in good company among other top-ranked research universities and are indicative of a "pre-eminent" university.

When our students earn a diploma from Florida State, we want it understood that they have the education necessary to live and work successfully in the 21st century.

I welcome your ideas and participation in these transformative developments.

Marshall inducted into American Academy of Arts and Sciences

By Barry Ray
COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES

One of Florida State's most distinguished researchers has been inducted into the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, joining 163 other fellows and foreign honorary members in the Class of 2013.

Alan G. Marshall, who is world-renowned for his pioneering work in co-inventing and developing Fourier transform ion cyclotron resonance (FT-ICR) mass spectrometry — a revolutionary chemical analysis technique — is director of the Ion Cyclotron Resonance Program at the National High Magnetic Field Laboratory at Florida State.

Marshall and the rest of the Class of 2013 were formally welcomed to the Academy on Oct. 12 during an induction ceremony in Cambridge, Mass. The Academy, whose entire membership includes more than 250 Nobel Prize laureates and 60 Pulitzer Prize winners, is composed of accomplished leaders in education, business, public affairs, the humanities and the arts.

"Being inducted into the American Academy of Arts and Sciences is a tremendous honor," said Tim Logan, chair of FSU's Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry. "Each of the inductees has demonstrated a broad and lasting impact in their respective fields, and the same is true for Alan. He is an outstanding researcher but also has written outstanding textbooks and is a generous mentor to younger scientists at all stages of their careers. We are very pleased to have someone of Alan's talents on the faculty at Florida State."

Alan Marshall signs the American Academy of Arts and Sciences' Book of Members, a tradition that dates back to 1780.

In addition to Marshall, Academy Award-winning actors Robert De Niro and Sally Field, Emmy Award-winning filmmaker Ken Burns, novelist Martin Amis and jazz great Herbie Hancock were among the inductees at the Oct. 12 ceremony. Field and Burns read from the "Letters of John and Abigail Adams," and the ceremony concluded with a performance by Hancock.

"The induction ceremony recognizes the achievement and vitality of today's most accomplished individuals who together with the Academy will work to advance the greater good," said Academy Secretary Jerrold Meinwald. "These distinguished men and women are making significant strides in their quest to find solutions to the most pressing scientific, humanistic, and policy challenges of the day."

Marshall is now one of two current FSU faculty members to have been elected a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. The other is Ellen Taaffe Zwilich, the Francis Eppes Distinguished Professor of Composition, who received the honor in 2004. Five previous FSU faculty members also were named fellows of the Academy.

Green Your Lunch

Wondering how to make sustainability more applicable to your daily life? Start by "greening" your lunch! Here are a few tips to make your work lunches more eco-friendly:

First, bring your lunch to work. This can help cut down on disposable packaging. Take an extra step and make your lunch from fresh, local ingredients. Homemade lunches are often healthier as well!

Second, make a "green kit" for your lunches. Keep utensils, a reusable cup/bottle, and a bowl or plate at your desk. This reduces waste from disposable cutlery and serving dishes.

Third, try to go meatless at least one day per week. Limiting your meat intake is good for your health and the environment.

Finally, consider the packaging and waste generated from catered lunches. Collect the boxes after a catered boxed lunch for recycling. Save any unused silverware, condiments or napkins and share them with your office.

Awards recognize faculty support of distance learning

Eleven members of the Florida State community were recognized for their contributions to distance learning during the 2012-2013 Distance Learning Awards Ceremony Nov. 13.

The event was held in conjunction with National Distance Learning Week.

“At Florida State, we strive to create the same level of quality learning for our distance students that their on-campus counterparts enjoy,” said Susann Rudasill, director of the Office of Distance Learning.

A special Lifetime Achievement Award was presented to Florida State President Emeritus Talbot “Sandy” D’Alemberte for his early and continuing support of distance learning.

“Without Sandy’s pioneering efforts on behalf of distance learning at Florida State, our programs would not be as extensive and highly regarded as they are today,” Rudasill said.

Excellence in Online Course Design awards were presented to John Crow, graduate teaching assistant, religion; Vanessa Dennen, associate professor, educational psychology and learning systems; Jennifer Koslow, associate professor, history; Rosemary Prince, associate in recreation, tourism and events, Panama City Campus; and Lisa Spainhour, professor, civil and environmental engineering.

An Innovative and Effective Use of Technology award was presented to Gloria Lessan, associate in sociology.

Excellence in Online Teaching awards were presented to Kevin Beaver, professor, College of Criminology and Criminal Justice; Janet Berry, retired faculty member, College of Social Work; and April Powell, instructor, communication disorders.

An Excellence in Online Mentoring award was presented to Changhyun Nam, graduate assistant, retail merchandising and product development.

All Florida State instructors of record and mentors were eligible to be nominated. Submissions were evaluated on quality of design, ability to engage students, and effectiveness of technology and online teaching strategies.

The nominations were reviewed by a committee of ODL instructional development faculty members and past University Teaching Award recipients including, Tim Glenn, College of Visual Arts, Theatre and Dance; Susan Fiorito, College of Business; Phyllis Underwood, College of Education; and Lisa Waxman, Visual Arts, Theatre and Dance.

BARRON’S ADDRESS

“We are No. 70 among publics with a 26-to-1 student/faculty ratio,” Barron said. “We would have to add 620 faculty members to reach the ratio of the No. 25 university.”

Barron touched on the importance of engagement, giving high marks to the university’s promotion of engagement in several areas, including opportunities for honors students and student-veterans.

In answer to the Florida Legislature’s and governor’s calls for a greater focus on STEM (science, technology, engineering and mathematics) and to essentially produce recession-proof students, Florida State is focusing dollars on student scholarships to attract the top 10 percent of high school students and more STEM-ready students.

“We will, however, continue asking ‘Where is student demand’ in order to promote excellence in every single area,” he said.

Barron reported that Florida State is No. 17 in retention and No. 28 in graduation rates. What’s more, the university has an 87.5 percent graduation rate among its student-veterans, as compared to 60 percent nationally.

The ranking, which demonstrates the university’s commitment to student-veterans, is worthy of a “national standing ovation,” according to Barron.

Faculty are encouraged to apply for awards, memberships

Florida State faculty members are encouraged to take advantage of the practical assistance offered by the Office of Faculty Recognition in preparing and submitting nominations for many high-profile faculty awards and professional memberships.

“These nominations are important not only to faculty members but also to the university,” said Sally McRorie, vice president of Faculty Development and Advancement. “Becoming fellows of academic organizations confirms the national standing of faculty members and puts them in line for other highly notable awards, particularly in the sciences.”

In addition to the most prestigious scholar and fellow nominations to professional academies, institutes and societies, the Office of Faculty Recognition keeps track of more than 2,000 awards through its Faculty Award Catalog.

“Our office emails due-date reminders and works with faculty members to complete any award nomination,” said

SPRING DUE DATES FOR SELECT FACULTY AWARDS

American Dietetic Association/Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics: Multiple award nominations due Feb. 1, 2014

American Sociological Association: Multiple award nominations due Feb. 1, 2014

Geological Society of America: Multiple award nominations due Feb. 1, 2014

American Philosophical Association: Multiple award nominations due in March and June of 2014

Modern Language Association: Multiple award nominations due April 1, 2014

American Historical Association: Multiple award nominations due May 1, 2014

Peggy Wright-Cleveland, director of the Office of Faculty Recognition. “We solicit nominations for most of these 2,000 awards annually.”

Many of the awards in the Office of Faculty Recognition’s Faculty Award Catalog have been recognized by the National Research Council as “Highly Prestigious” or “Prestigious.”

In July of 2013, Provost and Executive Vice President for Academic Affairs Garnett S. Stokes initiated the Extraordinary Accomplishments Program, which recognizes Florida State faculty members who receive awards on the

NRC list with permanent salary increases. (To view the full list of NRC-recognized awards, visit <http://ofr.fsu.edu/Award-Application-Information/NRC-Awards>.)

“The Extraordinary Accomplishments Program both recognizes the accomplishments of our faculty and encourages faculty to pursue awards in field and to nominate colleagues,” Wright-Cleveland said. “Awards build on awards and the Office of Faculty Recognition can help faculty members build a career plan that includes prestigious awards.”

Online training resources available for Student Central

By Megan Del Debbio
UNIVERSITY COMMUNICATIONS

Student Central is no longer just a buzzword on campus.

Now that the implementation of Florida State's new student information system, myFSU Student Central, is nearing completion, working within the system is critical to the roles of many faculty and staff members on campus.

A special online resource (<http://sc.my.fsu.edu>) provides individuals with a wealth of information, making online training available with the click of a button.

"The training website is the best resource for people to access when it comes to finding support materials or learning how to perform a specific task in Student Central," said University Registrar Kim Barber.

"When we started the project, we knew it was important to provide resources that would support individuals 24/7 through the transition. The training website does just that, regardless of where and when someone is working."

Kim Barber

The myFSU Student Central (SC) training website is divided into sections for faculty, staff, students, deans and chairs. Each category contains role-specific, how-to content and training materials to increase understanding in the new system. Online resources cover topics ranging from essential faculty functions, such as printing class rosters and managing textbooks, to key administrative staff roles, including curriculum management, enrollment and program/plan tasks.

"The website presents tasks in a step-by-step format, which makes the instructions very user-friendly and easy to follow," Barber said.

To further assist individuals with the transition, the SC project team hosts training courses and open labs. A calendar of upcoming training sessions can be found by clicking the "Student Central Events" link on the training website.

Looking ahead, grade rosters are the next item slated to transfer to SC. These will be available to faculty and staff in early December. Transcripts, academic standing, honors and awards will follow before the end of the semester. In January, admissions for Spring 2015 and beyond will be the last component to transfer to the SC system.

For more information and training resources, visit <http://sc.my.fsu.edu>.

This is what their nominators had to say about their performance:

Geoffrey Brown

"Geoff spends considerable time observing each teaching assistant and providing them with detailed, constructive feedback. He feels a strong sense of personal responsibility to the educational experience of the students in the courses and the professional development of the TAs. This is an enormous amount of work as we have about 25 TAs each semester."

Kevin Dixon,
Assistant in Biological Science

Kathleen Daly

*"Under Kathleen's leadership, the Office of Governmental Relations worked diligently to secure passage of House Bill 7129, the 'pre-eminence bill' and secure $3.3 million in recurring funds for the National High Magnetic Field Laboratory.
